

A lot of people don't even know Mardaani is about Indian women. It talks about them as if they were like any other girl that you come across, but what it does is rather upsetting. The film begins by showing the viewer the journey of a girl who has literally lived in fear all her life after being beaten up by her father. She goes on to live with an aunt who doesn't seem too thrilled with her arrival and she becomes a killer for hire. What happens next? The film begins with the arrival of Shivani (Rani Mukherji) to her first function as a police officer. It becomes evident very quickly that she is extremely dedicated towards her job. Sharma (Tahir Raj Bhasin), her direct supervisor, says that he will help her even though she's new at it all. Just as she is ready to go out, Shivani's father arrives, scaring the officer badly. He has come to take his daughter away with him so that she can start a new life in another country. With no other choice, Shivani accepts the offer upon learning that her father has changed for good. This is the time Shivani meets Indu (Aditi Rao Hydari) who has always seen her as a role model. They are also introduced to Raghav (Jimmy Shergill), Shivani's love interest. Shivani soon learns that her father is still involved in his activities, hitting girls and selling them off. Soon, she sees her own mother among the many helpless women and tries to run away with them. She also finds out that Raghav is part of the same group of people who help sell women off for sex, all under the guise of protecting Indian women. Things become worse as Shivani and her mother are forced to live with a man named Pandit (Saurabh Shukla). He has left his wife and daughter behind for this latest addition to his family. Shivani is now determined to stop men from ill-treating women in the country. She even kidnaps a man who is known as the most notorious one of them all.
